

“ARMAGEDDON”?

Christianity v Islam

An essay, written in June 2007, by the Authors of “The Celibate Conspiracy, Unmasked: God Revisited,” Glenn Coates and Keith Perry-Gore

“As long as people believe in absurdities, they will continue to commit atrocities.”

- Voltaire 1694 -1778

Since we wrote “The Celibate Conspiracy, Unmasked: God Revisited,” several important issues need to be expanded and further clarified.

The concept of an “Elect” people, the chosen of what is termed “God”, although present in ancient world religions (i.e. Egypt, Sumeria etc) is primarily seen today and historically as the property of Judaism/ Christianity/ Islam. Judaism consolidated its concept of election as being the chosen of God, in what we know as the “Maccabean Period”. Priests / Levites, Pharisees, Sadducees and other flavours of Judaism believed themselves to be superior to all other religions/races. Although present during the time of King David, Nationalism (Fascism) came to the fore in the 1st. Century BCE and through to 70CE.

Within the Judean /Christian context, it is St. Paul who is the originator of Christianity, not Jesus, and it comes out of Antioch, not Jerusalem. Jesus would cast his followers as another version of himself: a pilgrim / prophet (see Sermon on the Mount Matt.5 v1-12 and Luke 6 v 20 ff). Paul, a man of questionable Jewish credentials, a “kinsman” of King Herod Agrippa and a tortured gay man (Romans 7 v.13 ff.), loved the Aryan male mystique, and would from his followers forge the image of the athletic soldier as perfection (see Eph.6 v.10 ff., Phill. 3 v.12-14, 2Tim. 2v. 4-5 and 2Tim. 4 v.7). His ideal became dominant and hierarchical, creating and establishing a dynasty of priests. He gave the outward appearance of Jesus’ teachings but developed his own personal theology which he passed on to Mark and Luke. These teachings were a ruse upon which Paul could hang his cosmopolitan and elitist religion: a religion in which there would be no difference between Jew and Greek. A new invented law was developed based on his “Mind of Christ” determined to replace the wisdom of the world- common sense (Philippians 2v.5-11, 1 Cor.1v17-end and 1 Cor.2 v.14 to end), which became the property dispensed by elders/priests: circumcision became baptism and the “love feast” became a policed Holy Communion {1 Cor.11 v.23ff.) based on his convoluted Jewish / Jesus myths. Paul’s religion would spread neatly, conveniently and completely into the far reaches of the Roman Empire. The Church now becomes the “New Israel”, the Universal Holy Nation, and finds its fullest authority in that keystone passage declared to be from St. Peter, the supposed first Bishop of Rome. We read the following in 1 Peter 2 verse 9 (RSV 1952) “But you are a chosen race, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, God’s own people, ... Once you were no people ...” This passage is the primal vision of the Christian Church and of all Christians. It was mandated by an invented “St. Peter”, at the end of the first Century CE to bring all peoples of the world under the now Aryan Bishop of Rome, the Vicar of Christ of Earth, hence the term Catholic or Universal.

It is beyond argument that Paul and his Aryan neophytes would firmly establish the principle of a stratified “Christian Nation” encompassing the whole world - now the newly Elect Fascist People of God. Baptism, a painless, non penile rebirth “through the washing of regeneration” (Titus 3 v.5), made it exceptionally easy to add people, particularly Aryans to the new Nation. The developing dogmatism of Paul’s successors, most notably Ignatius of Antioch, would establish an orthodoxy with teeth, gradually demanding an army to defend it. Christianity would become the progenitor of the concept and reality of “The New Israel’s Army of God”. Mohamed, years later, would have the blue print he needed in this prototype, cast by Christianity, to develop “the religion of the sword” for the universal “Nation of Islam”.

As the Roman Empire declined and finally eclipsed through barbarian invasions, the Church stole the Emperor’s authority. Out of the rubble of the Eternal City a new empire arose under the Bishop of Rome. He vied for position among the other patriarchates: Jerusalem, Antioch, Alexandria and what became Constantinople. Position and Rome’s legacy of being the administrative centre of the known universe, made the Bishop of Rome a Caesar, establishing what finally became the Holy Roman Empire. Kings and Princes became but vassals to the emerging Aryan Papacy. The Crusades and the holy causes developed by relics etc. provided the impetus for an ecclesiastical army. History saw to it that the only force to be reckoned with would be the Eastern part of the Empire, centred in Constantinople.

After the division of the Church in 1054 CE, Constantinople quietly existed and was ruled by its Patriarch and its bearded rakish monks; the Turks (Islam) finally besieged and conquered the city (1453). Rome had previously waged war via the Crusades on the infidel Turk and was now free of the Greek Church's political influence and had the upper hand over all Christians in the West. At the end of the 15th. Century, when superstition went hand in hand with the bubonic fleas, Christianity as centred in Rome was dictating as eternal all kinds of potencies and charms for the healing of soul and body. The Crusades, the journeys to the East (Marco Polo), the Voyages of Columbus and the exposure to the physics of Islam, centered in Aristotle, created an undertow the Roman Church could not resist for ever.

Jan Huss appeared on the Continent, and John Wycliffe in England. Lollards, Albigensians and other forms of what the Church termed heresy became manifest. Moreover people were becoming fed up with the continual diet of burnings, beheadings, butcheries, and sodomite clergy which the Church promoted and perpetuated. Out of the foregoing Luther appeared and with him free thought. Since there could be no other legitimate thinking than that espoused by the Vatican, Luther was declared a heretic. But the liberating vital tonic had entered the mind and will of society, and all of Europe became intoxicated with free thought. The Vatican had no choice: a full defence was needed. Enter the Council of Trent (1560's), Ignatius of Loyola, and a whole new arsenal of mental gymnastics based on Thomas Aquinas (1200's). This would augment the thumb screw, rack and pyre. The Elect "Aryan Army of God" had been revitalised and with these new tools had an almost perpetual supply of the willing, the ignorant, religiously obsessed and sexually closeted. These would be conscripted under the threat of excommunication or Hell, to fight in what became the Thirty Years War against Protestantism and the new thought.

The Rationalism of the 17th. and 18th. Centuries as expounded by Voltaire, Hume, Locke and later Thomas Paine etc. developed a methodology of thought that made the Popes' knees knock. Forthcoming from these and other philosophers and political theorists came the revolutions in both North America and France. Republicanism continued to be the primary thorn in the side of institutional religion; the Church's only escape route remained the utilization of deepened and exaggerated superstition, resulting in the nineteenth century doctrines of the Immaculate Conception and Papal Infallibility. If the Council of Trent was the chicken, Vatican 1 (1873) was the infertile egg. Since then any pronouncement by the Pope "ex cathedra" is binding as dogma and can never be changed. Ever reverberating behind the scenes lay the more poignant reality of the Holy Roman Empire finding its roots in Constantine but as we have noted pre-existing in 1 Peter 2 v.9. and Paul's invented Mind of Christ.

Protestant Europe and North America established themselves on the world scene as powers with which to contend. The mishmash tiny Catholic Kingdoms under the dominance of Italy, Spain and Germany, all quaked in fear. In 1914, the embers of the Thirty Years War were fanned and rekindled with the assassination of Archduke Ferdinand of Austria by a Serb. World War 1 was elongated by Hitler who was a prime and nurtured puppet of the Vatican, to bring into existence a pristine form of the Holy Roman Empire, fulfilling its millennial prophetic qualification of The Revelation (Rev. 20 v.4) to which Hitler alluded. This became World War II (1939-45). The absolute proof of the pudding was that on D-Day (1944), no Roman Catholic country landed on the beaches of Normandy; and why should they? Hitler was the Roman Catholic Church's Christ figure who was bringing into full view the Kingdom of God on Earth for the next thousand years, putting Communism, the Orthodox Church and Protestantism, under his foot as the Lamb in the Revelation did to Satan, the Dragon. (D-Day would have arrived sooner had the United States entered the War at an earlier date. Senator greasy sabotaging Joseph Kennedy, as US Ambassador to the United Kingdom and under the tutelage of the Vatican, made his President and Government believe that England would be defeated. Kennedy subsequently advised US citizens in the UK to seek asylum in Catholic Eire). Hitler's proported tome, Mein Kampf, was none other than an addendum to that choppy nightmare called the book of The Revelation. As God purportedly dictated the book of The Revelation to a questionable John, so in the same vein the Vatican dictated Mein Kampf to Father Stempfle. His pirouetting co-Jesuits awaited, quill in hand before the Fuhrer, who would ratify with his imprimatur total approval on this extension of John's cataclysmic orgy of blood. Although Hitler was the prime marionette of the Vatican, the strings on Mussolini and Franco were also well played by agile and adept papal fingers. Hitler's cunning Pope, (Pius XII: Pachelli) made certain that ex-Nazis were favourably disseminated through out the Americas. With the Vatican's failure to defeat England in 1940, it turned on Orthodox Russia. Then there was and remains the Irish problem, the Quebec problem, the Falklands War, Spain's claim to the Rock of Gibraltar. Since 9/11 it is noteworthy that the Vatican has put on hold the Irish problem, now that Mohamed and his Koranic jottings have once again taken centre stage. Fascist Judaism bred Fascist Christianity, then Fascist Christianity bred Fascist Islam.

Rumblings through history have established that Mohamed took the most useful elements from Judaism and Christianity. A successful merchant, married to a wealthy widow, he wanted a Religion that would politically and commercially unite the Arab peoples. Having sequestered a Christian priest, Mohammed proceeded to elicit from and interrogated him regarding the teachings of the Bible, being careful not to incorporate Pauline Christian theology into his developing concept of God, Humanity and Heaven. After disposing of the Christian priest by dropping him down a well like a used tea bag, and while braced against his spitting camel, he proceeded to dream up his own Mein Kampf, the Koran. This book would present an idyllic utopia where Heaven was instantaneous upon death: seventy two virgins awaiting to both stimulate the libido of the supposed straight male, and satisfy the ego – all now present in the new Heaven: In the place where Christians would totally eradicate the flesh, Mohamed made certain that it would be enjoyed. Heaven would be patriarchal paradise, the female still a chattel, yet no longer a mere incubator in the next life. Whereas Christianity and Judaism, because of Rationalism and new thought, had to modify their religions and religious texts, this could not happen in Islam. Mohamed made certain that in no way the Koran and his vision of Islam, could be modified. Whereas casuistry exists in Christianity, it cannot within Islam. The supposed liberal Moslem therefore cannot adapt his dogma of jots and tittles.

In this day and age with the internet and world wide communications Islamic cleric's teeth rattle, in absolute paranoia, knowing that the Koran and Islam itself is imploding.

Christianity, in order to maintain its Elect people and sustain a distinct society made certain that the whipping post of sin and damnation would be held in high profile. Sin and damnation even though they seem cloaked in our liberated age were and remain intact under a system called "grace" as mediated by ministers / priests. In Islam the cleric or mullah would fulfill the same function. As dictated by the Koran, for the Elect true servants of Mohamed, there would be no Hell with which to contend.

In Christianity, the after life would be a rarefied version of a meeting of Stoic Greek philosophers being entertained at a non eventual plastic messianic banquet; the golden grapes would be for the eyes only: no sex, no biffies! This view of Heaven was contrasted with a fiery Hell where the propane supplies for the imp's blowtorches have no ending, and souls with quivering nervous systems, exist without bodies.

The Jews of traditional vintage (BCE200 – pre Maccabean) held the concept of Sheol, a form of afterlife in the nether regions of the Earth (Psalm 49; I Samuel 28). Fundamentalists will have none of this apostasy. There, there would be no stimulation, only memory greyness and numbness. It would not be a Heaven of plastic nor pastoral delights but simply a glum place for departed spirits, a place of no feelings, a limbo with no ending. This view was superseded by priests / Levites, Pharisees etc. during the Macabean period who deemed a "reward" necessary for those who fought bravely in the cause of Judaism (Wisdom of Solomon 3 v.1-11) the Elect or "Righteous" of God against the Selucids (Greeks). The framework of Heaven was invented: its foundation laid, with a three decker cosmology developing with Paul, would be further amplified for Christianity.

It would be the old concept of Sheol that made the Jews most hated amongst their neighbours and consequently the world. The Jew was a materialist believing in an afterlife of nothingness for all: if one had life it was only for the present and that made them from the beginning entrepreneurs, par excellence. Even though some later adopted a more Christianised view of Heaven, the stigma of Sheol and its repercussions has remained with them throughout the centuries. It would be St. Paul, referring to the Jews who would say "If in this life only we have hope... we are most to be pitied" (1 Cor. 15 v.19).

The political world remains inundated by religion with its messianic messages manipulating people such as George Bush, Steven Harper, John Howard, Tony Blair etc. We need not comment here on the ultimate reality of how Mohamed's message fires the messianic and destructive vision of Islam as controlled by its mullahs. Pope Benedict XVI and evangelical Protestant fundamentalists, remain in control of the Christian extreme right and how the body politic of the Third World functions. Birth Control is still taboo in most African countries, with the Anglican Church supporting the Pope in the venture of keeping up the Birth rate, the rate of disease and mortality, and the establishment of African Ruler's. Yet under the surface Islam foments a continuing unrest amongst the tribes and "Christian Order".

Russia, since Gorbachev, no longer sits quietly by; Putin, under the direction imposed by Orthodoxy, Russian and Greek, maligns the Religions of Western Christianity. The establishment of a U.S. Military Missile base in Eastern Europe, to control renegade Islamic States, is now considered a threat against Russian orthodoxy – the Motherland.

The whirlwind is gathering (Hosea 8 v.7). Concepts of God – Election – afterlife, are crippling humanity and planet earth. People who are certain that they are the Elect and on their way to a beautiful heaven and would prostelize/brainwash, should be sent on without delay, with no supper, exiting this vale of tears. Then they can enjoy their second life because they damn well do not enjoy their first, and are a hindrance to those who wish to enjoy the here and now and preserve the planet that God has given them: clearly “the sanctity of human life” is a meaningless political platitude. It is worth remembering why the USA wisely used the nuclear bombs on the Japanese to end World War II. The Japanese kamikaze suicide pilots were causing havoc against US forces, and increasing their efforts. Their religion gave them a clear vision of the next life. They saw themselves as the Elect and they would be joining their ancestors. The suicide bombers of Islam are likewise increasing with their agrarian and erotic view of Paradise: we wonder whether a similar solution may not be necessary.

Only a rational belief that can better the state of Human life and existence on earth, giving all peoples and the environment a universal slice of well being and contentment, is worthy of discussion.

St Augustine, in his writings, pointed out that at the root of Christianity, coming from Paul, there are two cities: the City of Man and the City of God. These form two nations, the Damned and the Elect. We have shown how I Peter 2 v.9 written at the end of the first Century, has mandated this message for all Christians, which came into its fullness under Hitler, only to be muzzled by Protestant and Orthodox Allies. It lies in stupor at this time. The most powerful arm of Christianity, the Roman Catholic Church, awaits in animated suspension, pending its final conflict under the authority of the Hitler Youth trained Pope, Benedict XVI, Christ’s Vicar on Earth. Islam, however, using a similar methodology under its vision of “The Nation of Islam”, is in its birth pangs and must conflict with Christianity’s version. The Jews will simply wait things out, utilising modern weaponry, in defence, when necessary. They anticipate a land flowing with milk and honey for all peoples in the here and now. If there is to be conquest, or any form of Armageddon, it will be between Christians and Muslims. The Elect of God will argue at the cost of many lives over whose fictitious ideology will triumph.

AN EXTRACT OF THIS ESSAY APPEARED IN THE AUG.-SEP. 2007 ISSUE OF DIALOGUE MAGAZINE.